CAN YOU RELATE?

- You really want to help your teen figure out their career path, but you're not sure how to approach it.
- Your teen seems overwhelmed with choices, and you worry that you might add to their stress instead of helping.
- You think it's important to have open conversations about their interests and passions, but you don't know how to guide those discussions without pushing too hard.

There will never be one right choice. Help them make a choice that feels right.

Making university choices out-of-context is never the best idea. Invest time with career discovery first.

Employers don't care what your school thinks; they hire what they need for their organisation. If your teen is not aware of employer demands, they are not gaining career readiness.
